

30 choices for 30 years

To celebrate the 30th anniversary of Artweeks, Artistpublishers.com is launching an Oxfordshire-wide public vote on the piece of work being exhibited during Artweeks that most sums up where they live.

Artists taking part in Artweeks are being invited to enter a work of their choice – not necessarily a landscape but an image that captures the spirit of the county - for the competition and the first 30 uploaded to the site during March will be put to a public vote. The vote will take place via the Artistpublishers.com website and also, we hope, in person at the Jam Factory exhibition during April. The result will be announced in early May. The winning artist will receive £300 worth of printing from Artistpublishers.com and a member of the public drawn from the entries received will get the chance to select a print from the “30 Choices” on display.

Artistpublishers.com is a unique virtual gallery showcasing the work of a fantastic and eclectic mix of working artists around Britain and beyond. The site enables artists to “self-publish” their work as greetings cards, postcards and prints and reach new audiences (including high street card shops) at the click of a button. Everything is printed on-demand, so there is no commitment to buy stock.

You can upload your entry to the Artistpublishers.com “virtual gallery” for free as part of this competition – the usual price for entry to the gallery and to have a work set up for publication and sale is £15 plus VAT. To take part, just log on to www.artistpublishers.com and follow the links to the Artweeks competition for more information. Entries close on Monday 2nd April 2012 when the public vote will begin. Results will be announced at the start of Artweeks on 5th May 2012.
